I've had children and lost them. I've lived in cages and in beautiful homes. But these days, a lot of my thinking is done behind closed eyelids, as I just feel so old and tired all the time. Now, you're probably confused at this point because, in human years, thirteen isn't old at all; but in dog years, especially if you're a sheltie like me, that's ancient. So, when my human parents-the best people you could ever meet-started moping around the house, I knew something was up. For a few days, I tried to ignore it, but after another visit to the doctor, we all had to finally face the truth. I am dying. But the story I have to tell you isn't a sad one. You might say we dogs tend to view the world through rose-colored glasses. But really, we just see it for the wonderful place it is. Sure, there are difficult moments, but that's just it-they are momentary. The way I see it, every day we have a choice to love, laugh, and be grateful.

After seeing a wounded creature on the beach, an animal like no one, Manu decides to nurse it back to health and becomes its valuable friend, one that will later return the favor during dangerous times, in a tale about the discovery of the Hawaiian Islands. At times poignant, at times funny, always touching, this wide-ranging essay collection will speak to every reader. The heartrending opener, Forgive Myself, is about Stephanie Kepke's struggle to overcome the soul-crushing guilt after she fainted while holding her day-old newborn, allowing him to plummet to the hospital floor and leaving him with a skull fracture. The bittersweet closing essay is a letter to young mothers, written after leaving her oldest son at college, imploring them to enjoy the beautiful chaos that is life with young children--before the house is quiet. In between are essays about parenting a child with mental illness; giving up perfectionism in motherhood; battling an eating disorder (and parenting a child battling an eating disorder); health struggles; beauty and aging gracefully; hockey and more. This book is a journey--a winding, sometimes joyous, sometimes painful, but always worth it--journey, just like life...
